Financial.

The banks were dull yesterday, a pause occurring in the very modest share of business doing, and no changes were to be heard of, except that a local scrip or two were looking lower, from a dunination in the demand for them. The general condition of financial matters shows improvement almost everywhere, from the increased activity in the demand for money. The Circinnati Enquirer says: "The volume of business in financial mays: "The volume of business in financial says: "The volume of business in financial days in financial says: "The volume of business in financial says: "The volum

The Cincinnati Enquirer says: "The volume of business in financial there is a general improvement in the trade movement, now that the month is fully turned, values in some instances showing considerable advance. The demand for loans is better, but there is a very ample supply of canable funds." The St. Louis Republican, two demands of the construction wednesday, reports: "The demand for oney remains decidedly better than is drainarily experienced at this period of the ar, and the majority of the banks report eir loans considerably in excess of what ey were at the corresponding period last ar. The bulk of this loans are made on rular commercial paper representing commercial paper representing ate transactions." GENERAL TRADE. Fears of a possible epidemic had a pecu-har effect upon trade yesterday—the usual run of business was brought almost to a stand. Feed and produce were almost sab-batically quiet, yet the drays are rarely more active—boxes, barrels, bags and cases were rushed out of store with all possible velocity.

They were groceries and provisions on their way where the possible interruption of com-munication might cause difficulty, perhaps distress. In this condition of things what was done in the usual way was mere routine and at unchanged rates for the most part. Quotations below are for round lots at the landing and the railroad depots, and include neither drayage, storage, nor other expenses outside of the bare freight and charges up to arrival. Jobbing and store sales are at higher rates, as they include drayage, storage, and profit of the dealer.
